The first auxiliary salient is useful in conjunction with the first salient as a prime defensive measure for covering the developing manoeuvres of the superior pieces in the opening; its most important feature is KB P at K B 3, which supports K P and prevents the posting of an adverse piece at K Kt 4. Both these salients belong to what is called the open game, in which the first move is 1. K P-K 4, and the forces are developed with the primary objects of attack and defence on the K s side. The second salient and the second auxiliary salient, on the other hand, are characteristic of the close game, in...
