Small cows do not require more than 4 feet and 9 inches of standing floor, and for oxen, 5 feet is enough. Three and a half feet is ample width for cows. Some stables are made with the platform, or standing floor, three inches less at one end than the other, for the shorter cows. The stanchion for fastening is the mode here used, almost without exception. N. R. -V. r. The Cattle Plague. --It begins to look as if the rinderpest had about reached its maximum in England and Scotland. For several weeks ttaefe has been no important increase in the weekly reports of cases--the number having ranged from 12, 000 to 13, 000 per week. The Farmer remarks, as an evidence that the disease is assuming a milder type, the fact that a number of recoveries during the last week...
