Excerpt: . . . portal, was put in by Roussel, the original owner, not by Philibert. Mr. Casgrain even suggests that the stone, with its mediaeval design and lettering, may have been imported from France and had no reference to any particular event in the lives of the occupants of the house. The author is a painstaking investigator of the minutiae of history; but at times his grammar is defective and his construction involved. Blockade of Quebec in 1775-1776 by the American Revolutionists (Les Bastonnais). Published by the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec, and Edited by Fred. C. WUrtle. Quebec, 1905. Pp. xiv, 308. This is a finely printed, illustrated volume in the Seventh Series of Historical Documents, 1905, of the chief of the Canadian historical societies. Several of the photographic illustrations are practically documents. Besides two journals of occurrences in the Province of Quebec since the...
